Special Telecast Scheduled for Dec. 21 on 'Coming of Christ'

Many of the most ennobling and beautiful works of art in the history of civilization will be utilized to relate the story of Christ's birth, boyhood and ministry, when "Project 20" presents "The Coming of Christ," Wednesday, Dec. 21, at 8:30 p.m., PST, via channel 4. Sponsored by the U.S. Steel Corp., the half-hour telecast, in full color, will be seen on the NBC-TV network.

The program will employ the special camera effects — still-pictures-in-motion — that have won high acclaim for previous "Project 20" shows. The special unit, during months of travel and research, photographed priceless art treasures from museums, libraries, churches and private collections, all over the world.

director of special projects, will produce and direct, "The Coming of Christ." It was under Hyatt's aegis that "Project 20" introduced the "still-pictures-in-motion" technique which gave movement and flow to century-old photographs and prints, in "Meet Mr. Lincoln."

Hyatt joined NBC in 1950 and, later, a member of the staff of "Victory at Sea," a series of 26 half-hour films for TV on the naval history of World War II.

WHEN THE "Project 20" unit was formed in 1954, Hyatt was named assistant producer and was appointed its producer-director in 1958. Such "Project 20" programs as "Mark Twain's America," "The Innocent Years," "The Jazz Age" and "Life in the Thirties," have been hailed by the critics and the public as television at its best.

Scourby, well-known as an actor in television and on the Broadway stage, narrated earlier "Project 20" shows. He has also recorded the complete Bible and 200 other works in their entirety, for "talking books" for the blind.
